Q1. Read the following passage carefully: (5 marks)

He's a lover of languages, fluent in German, French and English and of course, his mother tongue Tamil. Teaching German at the Goethe Institute upto seven days a week, and heading the long distance learning programme in cooperation with IGNOU, keep him very busy. As if his life wasn't hectic enough, P. Saralathan has translated Franz Kafka's 'Letter to the Father' from the original German text into Tamil. The Tamil translation is entitled 'Thandaiku'. Saralathan says he was inspired to translate 'Letter to the Father' for the potential of Kafka's words make us look at the power wielded by Indian parents over their children. In a rare departure from contemporary Indian or Tamil literature, this book explores the son's pent up remorse towards his father. It is not to say that a son in India cannot feel for his father, but according to Saralathan, it's something that is not really discussed openly in our patriarchal society.

Answer the following questions by selecting the most appropriate options from the ones given below :

Q2. Read the following passage carefully:

(5 marks)

It is well known now that addressing the problem of climate change requires lifestyle changes. Some solutions might be difficult but others are not so. Consider handicrafts for example. A range of jute products – hand bags, files, office bags, table cloth and decorative wall hangings – can replace many utility and decorative pieces produced in factories. Utility and decorative items made by skilled artisans using bamboo, different kinds of grass and leaves are equally graceful and artistic.

Most states in India have hundreds of such biodegradable handicraft items. The classic Odissi paintings from Orissa, the delicate wood work of Bastar district of Chhattisgarh, the bamboo products from the northeast, the fine metal work from Tamil Nadu and Karnataka, and the chikankari work of Uttar Pradesh, are some examples of India's thriving craft traditions. However, India's share in global handicraft market is only 2 per cent. The country is alive to such concerns. It has pegged the handicrafts export target at Rs. 25,000 crore per annum by 2010.

On the face of it, the target does not seem unrealistic. Eco-friendly products are liked by the people in the West and the developed world. This could work to the benefit of India's more than five million artisans. But nurturing age - old skills might not be easy. Selling handicrafts is easy but preserving the age - old skills is difficult.

The market too demands diversity. A number of artisans have lost the ability to create unique pieces in response to varying needs. To solve all these problems the government must identify senior artisans and give them facilities and the time to bring about innovation.

- (a) Use of eco-friendly goods can bring about _____.
- (i) change in life - style of people.
- (ii) degradation of climate.

- (iii) problems in one's life.
- (iv) comfort in one's life.
- (b) India's Handicraft export target doesn't seem unrealistic because _____.
- (i) India has more than five million artisans.
- (ii) we have the right policies to nurture the age old skills.
- (iii) eco - friendly products are quite popular in the west and developed countries.
- (iv) India contributes 2 percent in global handicrafts.
- (c) The word 'addressing' means _____.
- (i) solving
- (ii) looking
- (iii) regarding
- (iv) ignoring
- (d) The number of artisans have lost the ability to create unique pieces because _____.
- (i) artisans are not innovative.
- (ii) of huge demand.
- (iii) of varying needs.
- (iv) none of the above.
- (e) To motivate artisans the government should _____.
- (i) give loans.
- (ii) appreciate the old-age skills.
- (iii) identify senior artisans.
- (iv) provide senior artisans all possible facilities and time.

(Preferably miles away from me)
Neat hectares of the stuff reserved
For those in need of flower of tree.

I'll make do with landscape painting,
Film documentaries on TV.
And when I need to escape painting
Then open mouthed I'll head for the sea.
Let others stroll and take their pleasure
In grass wade up to the knees
For I derive no earthly pleasure
From the green, green rash that makes me sneeze.

Q4. Read the following passage carefully:

(5 marks)

Inside the caravan, I stood on a chair and lit the oil lamp in the ceiling. I had some weekend homework to do and this was as good a time as any to do it. I laid my books on the table and sat down. But I found it impossible to keep my mind on my work.

The clock showed half past seven. This was the twilight time. He would be there now. I pictured him in his old navy blue sweater and peaked cap, walking soft-footed up the track towards the wood. He told me he wore the sweater because navy-blue hardly showed up in the dark, black was even better, he said. The peaked cap was important too, he explained, because the peak casts a shadow over one's face. Just about now he would be wriggling through the hedge and entering the wood. Inside the wood, I could see him treading carefully over the leafy ground, stopping, listening, going on again and again all the time searching and searching for the keeper who would be standing somewhere, as still as a post, behind a big tree with a gun under his arm. Keepers hardly move at all when they are in a wood watching for poachers, he had told me. They stand dead still, right up against the trunk of a tree and its not easy to spot a motionless man in that position at twilight.

I closed my books. It was no good trying to work. I decided to go to bed instead. I left the lamp burning. Soon I fell asleep.

When I opened my eyes again, the oil-lamp was still glowing and the clock on the wall showed ten minutes past two.

I jumped out of my bunk and looked into the bunk above mine. It was empty. He promised he would be home by ten thirty at the latest and he never broke promises.

At that moment, a frightful sense of doom came over me. Something really had happened to him this time. I felt quite certain of it.
