PROSPECTUS

FOR

UNDERGRADUATE DEGREE PROGRAMMES

Introduction

In pursuit of modernizing agriculture and providing professional services to the farming community, the College of Agriculture, Dharwad, was established in 1947 by the erstwhile provincial state of Bombay. This college was started at Agricultural Research Station, Hebballi Farm (Dharwad) about 8 kms. away from present campus. Initially, the college was affiliated to Bombay University and in 1950 affiliation was transferred to Karnataka University, Dharwad. The College came under administrative control of the Department of Agriculture, Government of Mysore (later renamed as Karnataka) after re-organization of the state in 1956. Subsequently, the College became the constituent college of University of Agricultural Sciences, Bangalore in 1965 and with the formation of a separate Agriculture University in Northern Karnataka in 1986, the college came under the jurisdiction of University of Agricultural Sciences, Dharwad. The University has multifold functions of teaching, research and extension in the field of agriculture and allied sciences. Presently, jurisdiction of the University extends to 7 northern districts of Karnataka. The University with its 5 constituent colleges, 26 Research Stations, 5 KVKs' and 6 EEU's caters to the needs of farming community and thereby plays an active role in enhancing the agricultural production.

Teaching

One of the missions of the University is to impart higher education in agriculture and allied sciences for creating and developing human resources in the fields necessary for overall agricultural development of the country, in general, and state, in particular. Teaching activity is carried out through five colleges in four campuses. All the colleges have been accredited by ICAR with "A" Grade. Both undergraduate (UG) and postgraduate (PG) degree programmes are offered in different disciplines under semester system. Undergraduate degree programmes are offered in the following colleges.
